CRINKLED SLUB FABRIC

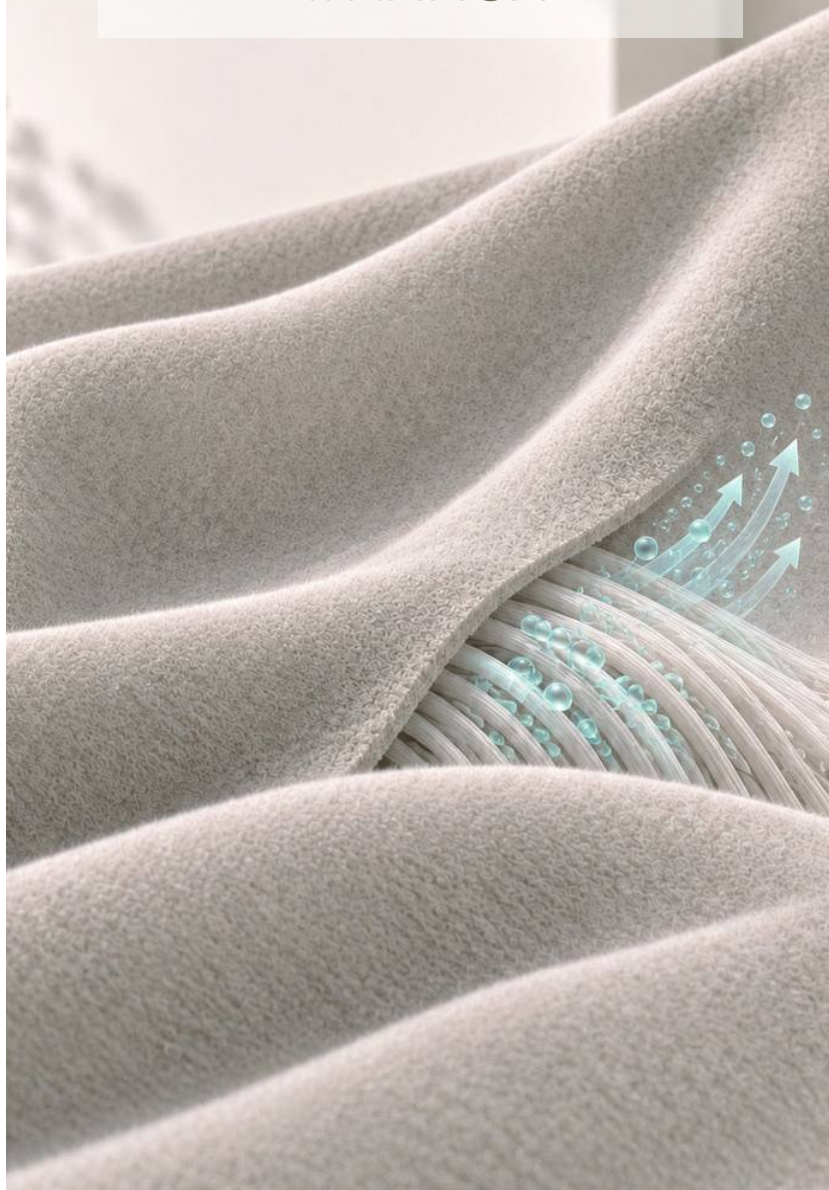

A vertical collage of images related to linen fabric production. At the top, there are cross-sections of light-colored logs. Below them, a large pile of raw, white, fibrous material is shown. In the center, a bundle of long, white, spun fibers is draped. To the right, there are some dried, brown plant stalks with small, round seed pods. At the bottom, a close-up of a finished, white, plain-weave linen fabric is shown, with its characteristic texture and folds clearly visible.
